10. A 15% Buyer's Premium will be added to the final bid amount when invoiced.

11. We have made every effort to describe Lot items as accurately as possible. Expect normal signs of wear associated with antiques, vintage, and used items. We do not list every flaw. All items are sold AS IS, and where is. No refunds or returns. Caring Transitions does not guarantee the working order of any clock, watch, electronic or mechanical device. Dimensions given may be approximate.

12. Listings times have a soft close. Extra time may be added to ending times to allow bidders more time to win. This will give you time to receive an outbid notification and place a higher bid and mimics what happens in a live auction where the auctioneer asks for any last bids before making the sale.
13. Payment lapse will incur an interest rate and failure to pay after three reminders will cause a buyer to be moved to the defaulters list.

Test OK updated Ultimately it's up to you to make your event a success. And that includes driving event ticket When to start selling tickets online

You should begin event ticket sales ASAP. More independent than ever, today's consumers have become savvy shoppers, seeking out information about a product or event as soon as it becomes available. In fact, 19% of buyers want to connect with an event brand right when they first learn about it. And once they've done their own research, checked in with their network, and reviewed your online presence, in a few short hours they're ready to make their purchase pretty much immediately.

Which means you have to have your ticketing up and ready to go when you first announce your event. Even if you're not done planning the rest of it. Because as soon as your prospects get wind of it, more than one third of them will be ready to purchase on the spot or, at the very least, won't require much time to make their decision and would prefer to buy tickets as soon as they decide to.

Test OK updated Ultimately it's up to you to make your event a success. And that includes driving event ticket When to start selling tickets online

You should begin event ticket sales ASAP. More independent than ever, today's consumers have become savvy shoppers, seeking out information about a product or event as soon as it becomes available. In fact, 19% of buyers want to connect with an event brand right when they first learn about it. And once they've done their own research, checked in with their network, and reviewed your online presence, in a few short hours they're ready to make their purchase pretty much immediately.

Which means you have to have your ticketing up and ready to go when you first announce your event. Even if you're not done planning the rest of it. Because as soon as your prospects get wind of it, more than one third of them will be ready to purchase on the spot or, at the very least, won't require much time to make their decision and would prefer to buy tickets as soon as they decide to.
